1. A new radio transmitter has been installed in the Navigation Direction building at Split. In addition to handling official maritime traffic, this station will be used for sending to ships at sea and receiving from them personal telegrams. Such traffic passing through the new installation bears the name "SPLITRADIO".
2. The radio station is linked to the municipal Split electrical net, but it is believed that a small auxiliary power-house will be built adjacent to the Navigation building.
3. For the various aeriels, two pylons have been erected on the roof, one 5 meters high, the other 12 meters. Between the main dome of the building and the 12 meter pylon, the sending aerial has been set up. The receiving aerial is located between the dome and the second pylon. The radio station is also to be equipped for wireless telephony, and particular attention is being paid to a scheme for the regular transmission of meteorological information.
4. Work on the new Split station is being carried out by local electrical technicians.
